ADMISSION PROCESS: TAP (TimesPro Admission Process) test + Interview

STUDENTS SPEAK

Karishma Singh

I like this program because it focuses on 35% theoretical concepts and 65% practical learning. The best feature about TimesPro's Distributed MBA is that the course trains graduates with professional skills required in real life job situations. I can vouch for it from my own experience, since the practical approach of the program increased my confidence in facing people and making presentations. The course not only prepares us for a bright career but also makes us skilled professionals.

The campus life is very cordial. It provides multiple course diversity, depending on the need for a job. The immersion program like BNAS helped us to know about poor people's idea of banking; Harvard Material (case studies, book chapters, technical notes, etc.) along with other material (articles, white papers, etc.) are an experiential learning process that makes the Distributed MBA a cut above the rest.

K. Aditya

TimesPro's Distributed MBA gave me a great chance to increase my knowledge about the industry. The best feature about it is the diversified and well planned course structure. Along with that the well prescribed text books aided me in gaining knowledge about the financial system step by step, as I'm from technical background. The direct interaction between corporates and the students also helped us gain an insight of the industry from an experienced professional's perspective.

Programs like BNAS and banking immersion helped me understand the present condition of the rural public, their needs, and the working of banking and financial institutions. Specialized faculty with great experience helped me in understanding the concepts and thus to do well in the certification courses like NCFM, NISM and DBF which are also included in the course structure. Another good thing is that the students are from different parts of the country and that helps us in getting accustomed to different cultures and mindsets.

The campus life is one of the best features about this course as all the students are allotted rooms in such a way that we stay together and help each other study and share knowledge.

Mansi Shah

Timespro's Distributed MBA is designed in a way which helps build service, self and professional competencies along with co-curricular certifications. Classroom delivery is done through the best case study material of Harvard Business School and other course material that helps enhance our capabilities in the professional world.

Distributed MBA comes with a combination of University Credits and Professional certifications, taught by experienced faculties. I am very satisfied by the education system that has helped me transform into a professional.
